About the Course

The incidence of diseases in livestock is the major constraint in profitable animal husbandry. The losses to farmers due to diseases include treatment costs, losses due to decrease in production and death of the animals. To minimise the losses it is necessary that the diseases are diagnosed early and suitable treatment be given in time.

The course contents include lectures and hands-on practical on important topics related to animal diseases.

Under the changing dynamics of animal husbandry and animal rearing practices, it is necessary to train the field veterinarians and extension functionaries working in the area of animal husbandry in order to make them aware of the modern techniques in diagnosis of animal diseases and thus increasing the animals productivity and profitability. The ultimate objective of the training is to provide the trainees with holistic knowledge and training on Advanced diagnostic tools for diagnosis of animal diseases and their management.
